Call out for Interstitial Animators

Have you ever wanted to take a script and give it life?

Have you ever wanted to design the characters and locations from the script?

Have you ever wanted to storyboard it in a unique and dynamic way, then animating it into a 90 second interstitial that will air in North America and possibly beyond?

Then Brown Bag Films is looking for you!

We require talented storytellers with a design, storyboard and animation background who can deliver 90-second interstitials for a brand new series set to air in 2018.

For these interstitials, you will work independently, no need to be in our studio. You will be in direct contact with the series director and producer to provide milestones according to the production schedule.

All of our scripts are based on folktales from around the world and will be voice recorded ahead of the interstitials scheduled start.

To ensure we can get the best from you, there will be no storyboard or animation software mandates, we just ask that you can deliver to our technical specifications and blow us away with your storytelling and animation ability.

If you have what it takes to deliver what we are looking for we would love to hear from you. Please send your resume, a link to your online portfolio (including your previous design and storyboard work), and a link to your most recent animation reel to:
